Sonoma Ecology Center and Southern Sonoma County Resource Conservation District Launch the Sonoma Valley Watershed Conservancy Website

February 9, 2010 (Sonoma, CA) The Sonoma Ecology Center and Southern Sonoma County Resource Conservation District are proud to announce a new website that provides access to information about Sonoma Valley watershed stewardship events and activities. The Sonoma Valley Watershed Conservancy website, found at <http://stewards.sonomacreek.net> is the product of collaboration between these organizations and the residents of Sonoma Valley. This collaboration, called the Sonoma Valley Watershed Conservancy, is a growing coalition of over 500 community members dedicated to the wise stewardship of the watershed. Membership is open to everyone.

Through the Sonoma Valley Watershed Conservancy website, you can stay informed about upcoming educational seminars, community activities, and policy efforts focused on protecting the watershed's natural resources. You can also explore the Sonoma Valley Knowledge Base, a library of scientific information about the watershed; download brochures with information about fish, animals, plants, pollution and more; and learn about restoration projects that reduce the potential for flooding while enhancing fish habitat.

Interested citizens can also find opportunities to get involved, such as by joining or starting a Stream Stewards group or by volunteering for a creek cleanup or restoration project.

Funding for this website was provided by voter-approved Proposition 50 funds administered by the San Francisco Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board and supported through a grant awarded by the California Department of Conservation.
